The Rehabilitation Act requires states, religious institutions, and other organizations that take federal funding to meet the same accessibility standards as other public spaces.

The U.S. Access Board has developed accessibility standards for fitness facilities and exercise equipment.

The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) requires streets, sidewalks, and public transportation to meet certain accessibility standards.